STOKES CAPTIVITY.

HIS LIFE IN THE TOMBS—LUXURIES DEFNED.

[From the New York Sun, Jan. 22.]

Edward S. Stokes, the murderer of Col. James Fisk, Jr., feels his confinement more irksome, every day. He is becoming nervous and irritable. His hair is becoming gray, his eyes have lost much of their brilliant lustre, and his wonted smile has vanished. On Saturday morning he asked Warden Stason to allow him a few hours exercise daily in the yard of the prison. The warden politely declined. Later in the day Stokes sent for Dr. W. T. Neals, the tonic physician, and complained that he was nervous and rapidly losing his appetite. He said that he was unable to sleep, and that having been in the habit of drinking a bottle of champagne daily at dinner he felt very much in need of it. He hoped the doctor would order him to drink a bottle of wine every day.

Dr. Neals felt his pulse, asked several questions, and then said that he thought Stokes would be better without any stimulants. Stokes was dismayed. He paced up and down his cell, and turning fiercely to Dr. Neals said, "Send Stason here, I want to see him."

The warden went to the cell door, and in reply to a question said that no one but the physician of the prison had authority to prescribe or allow liquors to be brought into the prison. Stokes said he would consult Prof. Alonzo Clarke on the subject, and added—

"There never was such a city or county in the world as this, where a man is considered guilty before he is tried or convicted. I can't stand this much longer."

During the afternoon Prof. Clarke called on Stokes. The latter was taken out of his cell to the counsel's room and medically examined by the professor. A consultation between Drs. Clark and Neals followed. The latter believes that Stokes does not require stimulants, and will not prescribe any. Prof. Clark will make his report in a day or two.
